

HOPE FOR ARRESTS SOON OF SLAYER OF MRS. WILKINS

Police and Woman Here Tell of Row in One of Rooming Houses of Doctor.

A battle royal that took place on the night of Feb. 11 in the rooming house owned by Dr. and Mrs. Wilkins at No. 164 West 65th Street, and which resulted in the discharge of the house-

WHEN YOU SUFFER FROM RHEUMATISM

Almost any man will tell you that Sloan's Liniment means relief.

For practically every man has used it who has suffered from rheumatic aches, soreness of muscles, stiffness of joints, the results of weather exposure.

Women, too, by the hundreds of thousands, use it for relieving neuritis, lame backs, neuralgia, sick headache. Clean, refreshing, soothing, economical, quickly effective. Say "Sloan's Liniment" to your druggist. Get it to-day. 30c, 60c, $1.20.

Sloan's
Liniment
Kills Pain

ADVERTISEMENT.
Article No. 2.

Chiropractic For Health

The mind of civilized man has been trained for centuries to believe that disease is a THING, a tangible something, an entity as it were, and that it can be cured by a drug—or by taking something into the human system through the stomach or otherwise that holds some strange and magical power to change disease into health. This idea, like many others, has prevailed through time largely because of its mysteriousness.

As long as people live they will subject their bodies voluntarily and accidentally to conditions of unusual burden on the spinal column and any of these stresses the column is physically unable to withstand will effect displacements of its parts. And inasmuch as the vast majority of human ailments result from compression of nerves caused by spinal subluxations, adjusting by the chiropractic method is the most important thing that can be done to improve the health of any suffering individual.

Inquiry at the office of the Chiropractor, where spinal analysis can be correctly made, will undoubtedly convince any sick individual that the good results claimed for chiropractic adjustments can be promptly and lastingly accomplished in nearly every kind of human ailment by merely using the hands to adjust the deviating joints of the spine responsible for the unnatural nerve pressure which causes the trouble.

Before consulting a Chiropractor always make inquiry to the Chiropractic Bureau of Public Information.

Address all inquiries to C. B., Box 50, The Evening World, New York City.

Chiropractors of New York & New Jersey

BELLANS
INDIGESTION
PAIN
6 BELLANS
Hot water
Sure Relief
BELLANS
FOR INDIGESTION

CHARITY.

CHARITY.

INFORMATION

For Friends and Relatives of

Wounded or Sick

SOLDIERS AND MARINES

Phone Number—Murray Hill 10430.

Twenty-four hours must elapse after a man is disembarked at this port before information is available.

CASUALTY BUREAU

20 EAST 38th STREET

NEW YORK COUNTY CHAPTER, AMERICAN RED CROSS

New Archbishop of New York Assumes The Power and Dignity of a Metropolitan When Pallium Falls on His Shoulders

The Most Romantically Convertment of the Catholic Church, Symbol of Responsibility and "Lamb of God" Is Expected Here in Two or Three Months—Then Will Come Magnificent Ceremonies of Investiture.

REPOSING in a silver gilt cabinet near the Confessio Petri in Rome is a circlet of snow-white wool, large enough to fall in a graceful curve over the shoulders and bearing two lappets, also of wool. It is marked with six black crosses, and at the ends of the lappets small weights are concealed under black silk. The fur was woven with exquisite skill by the hands of nuns who, from time out of memory, have found their task a loving duty, to be performed piously and prayerfully.

This circlet—the pallium—is destined, at some probably not far distant date, to be placed on the shoulders of Bishop Patrick J. Hayes of New York, when it will, as a symbol of the Catholic Church, invest him with the honor and the tremendous responsibility of Metropolitan of the Archdiocese of New York, the richest and most densely populated province in the United States. Until that time Bishop Hayes, although already designated as Archbishop, may not exceed his jurisdiction as a Bishop. At the moment the pallium is placed on his shoulders, however, the plenitude of office of a Metropolitan becomes his and the direction of the vast Archdiocese falls into his hands. It is likely that the pallium will reach New York in two or three months.

ON each Feast of St. Agnes the somber garbed nuns of that convent in Rome present at the altar of the Church of St. John Lateran two lambs in lieu of certain taxes that formerly were imposed. The presentation is made as the priest is intoning the "Agnus Dei," that prayer of the church imploring Christ, as the Lamb of God, to grant forgiveness and peace. The lambs are solemnly blessed on the high altar and then are accepted by the Canons Regular of the Lateran and are carefully tended until shearing time. The wool is then given to the nuns who make the pallium.

At the Second Vespers—that is, at the vespers of the afternoon of the Feast of St. Peter and Paul—the pallia are solemnly blessed and are immediately placed in the casket, where they remain until they are removed for the investiture of new prelates. Under the rule of the "Agnus Dei," the pope must petition the Pope for his pallium within three months after his designation as Archbishop. A messenger will be sent either from New York to Rome, or from Rome, to bear the vestment.

GENERALLY a newly appointed Archbishop is prohibited, in uncanonical terms, from performing any "episcopal act." The canon sets out that he may not perform any act of a Metropolitan in which the use of the pallium is prescribed. He may not bestow the pallium as a gift; if he is transferred to another archdiocese he must obtain a new pallium; he may not use it in another diocese without the permission of the Bishop of that diocese; he may wear tematic search of Long Beach cottages on the theory that the three men may be in hiding there. Belief that the men know Long Beach, have had a hand in the recent breaking and entering of many cottages there and are hidden away in one of them was strengthened early this morning when a member of the Provost Guard saw three young men standing near the Jackson Boulevard entrance to Nassau Hotel at Long Beach.

T. Provost Guard says he heard one of the young men ask for a match. He stepped out into the light, to L. J. them over, and the three, he says, ran.

The guard reported the matter to Sgt. Harry Schneider at Long Beach Police Station and, Long Beach, having but two patrolmen on duty at night, Sgt. Schneider called on Rockville Centre for help.

Capt. William Phillips and ten Rockville Centre policemen went to Long Beach by automobile and it was there who began "combing" the beach.

It was admitted at Mineola that Hansen, the finger print expert, will not be satisfied that everything possible in his line has been done until he is permitted to take the finger prints of a man at Long Beach whose name has been mentioned several times in connection with the murder story.

The Long Island detachment of the new State Constabulary, consisting of six mounted officers under Sgt. Sam McVey, began to-day a systematic search of Long Beach cottages on the theory that the three men may be in hiding there.

Belief that the men know Long Beach, have had a hand in the recent breaking and entering of many cottages there and are hidden away in one of them was strengthened early this morning when a member of the Provost Guard saw three young men standing near the Jackson Boulevard entrance to Nassau Hotel at Long Beach.

T. Provost Guard says he heard one of the young men ask for a match. He stepped out into the light, to L. J. them over, and the three, he says, ran.

The guard reported the matter to Sgt. Harry Schneider at Long Beach Police Station and, Long Beach, having but two patrolmen on duty at night, Sgt. Schneider called on Rockville Centre for help.

Capt. William Phillips and ten Rockville Centre policemen went to Long Beach by automobile and it was there who began "combing" the beach.

It was admitted at Mineola that Hansen, the finger print expert, will not be satisfied that everything possible in his line has been done until he is permitted to take the finger prints of a man at Long Beach whose name has been mentioned several times in connection with the murder story.

The Long Island detachment of the new State Constabulary, consisting of six mounted officers under Sgt. Sam McVey, began to-day a systematic search of Long Beach cottages on the theory that the three men may be in hiding there.

Belief that the men know Long Beach, have had a hand in the recent breaking and entering of many cottages there and are hidden away in one of them was strengthened early this morning when a member of the Provost Guard saw three young men standing near the Jackson Boulevard entrance to Nassau Hotel at Long Beach.

T. Provost Guard says he heard one of the young men ask for a match. He stepped out into the light, to L. J. them over, and the three, he says, ran.

The guard reported the matter to Sgt. Harry Schneider at Long Beach Police Station and, Long Beach, having but two patrolmen on duty at night, Sgt. Schneider called on Rockville Centre for help.

Capt. William Phillips and ten Rockville Centre policemen went to Long Beach by automobile and it was there who began "combing" the beach.

It was admitted at Mineola that Hansen, the finger print expert, will not be satisfied that everything possible in his line has been done until he is permitted to take the finger prints of a man at Long Beach whose name has been mentioned several times in connection with the murder story.

The Long Island detachment of the new State Constabulary, consisting of six mounted officers under Sgt. Sam McVey, began to-day a systematic search of Long Beach cottages on the theory that the three men may be in hiding there.

Archbishop Hayes.
POSED ESPECIALLY FOR THE EVENING WORLD.

in his own cathedral only on great feast days and certain similar occasions; if the pallium is worn out, he must obtain another from Rome; at death it must go with him to the grave.

These extreme precautions are taken out of respect for the Metropolitan, the importance of their constant union with the Pope. It prevents any spirit of autonomy arising among the Archbishops and keeps before their minds the fact that their power is a delegated one, which has its fountain head at the Vatican.

The origin of the pallium is quite as obscure as that of many other vestments of the Catholic Church.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

HIGH TRIBUTE PAID EAST SIDE TROOPS AT WORLD FORUM

Three Thousand Children and Parents Hear Soldiers Praised by Officers.

Three thousand enthusiastic and patriotic residents of the east side school children and their parents, among whom many wore service star badges of blue or gold, to-day crowded the auditorium of Public School No. 62, Essex and Hester streets to hear tribute paid to the soldiers from the east side, to fight for the Americanism The Evening World's Forum is fostering there.

Joseph S. Marcus, President of the Bank of the United States, was Chairman of the meeting.

"The Evening World Forum is a challenge to malingerers of the east side," Mr. Marcus said. "This virile publication deserves and will receive the gratitude of the entire east side for the great service it is doing."

Major Spencer F. Weaver of the 7th Division and Capt. James M. Loughborough, Intelligence Service officer in that division, a former Evening World reporter, were among the principal speakers.

Captain Loughborough told of the East Side boys who helped make up the division, told of the courage and dash shown by them in the battles that culminated in the victory in the Argonne. The men he talked of are the sons or brothers of those he was talking to. They cheered and tears glistened in many eyes as he told his story.

"The splendid boys of the east side upheld their honor and faith from camp Lytton to the trenches," Major Weaver said. "I cannot pay too high a tribute to those brave lads you all know and gave up to America's cause."

Early in the meeting it became necessary to close the doors of the auditorium, although hundreds outside were seeking admission.

The Children's Bureau, Department of the Evening World has met with such great success that the privilege of applying will shortly be discontinued. Such a mass of applications has been received at the office that the secretary has had great difficulty in coping with it. There is no doubt that the efforts of The Evening World to bring out the talent of the boys and girls of the east side is appreciated. It is the chance of a lifetime. Hitherto many boys and girls who had exceptional ability in singing, dancing and other arts in childhood have become men and women without seeing the realization of their hopes for fame and success.

The Evening World is trying to lend a helping hand to those boys and girls. All applicants for the department will be given an opportunity to appear at one of The Evening World forums if they desire. The directors that they are worthy of a trial. At the end of the season the "stars" will be selected and will be given a showing before prominent men and women in their own line of endeavor, who will act as judges for The Evening World. If these artists declare that the children have real talent The Evening World will give every possible aid in securing the education and training necessary for the proper development of talent.

If you wish your opportunity, sign the application which appears on this page to-day and send it with your teacher's indorsement to The Evening World. Do it now.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but it is only ornamental and does not in any way extend their jurisdiction.

THE "Liber Pontificalis" indicates that it was being used in the first half of the fourth century, when it is mentioned that Pope Marcellus (325) conferred it on the Archbishop of Ostia. Before that time it is supposed to have been worn exclusively by the Pope. The pallium was more generally bestowed in the fifth century, and by the ninth century came into general use. It was then given only to Archbishops and vicars nominated by the Pope, and the rule that they must petition for it was promulgated. It is conferred upon Bishops occasionally, but